Air Service LINKS WITH HONG KONG

The C.N.A.C. Douglas-Dolphin amphibian which flew northward on October 24 after making connection at Hong Kong for passengers of the Philippine Clipper, returned to this Colony yesterday afternoon carrying several passengers.

They were Mr. Juan Trippe, chairman of the Pan-American Airways, Mrs. Juan Trippe, Mr. H. M. Bixby, of the Pan-American Airways, and Mr. Tai Yan-choy, general manager of the China National Airways Corporation. They were met on their arrival by Mr. R. A. Lord, Mr. Trippe's secretary, and Mr. T. B. Wilson, of the Dollar Steamship Line.

The plane was ten minutes late and it was explained that she stopped at Canton to refuel and to discharge passengers and mail. Pilot Vaughan was at the controls and the vessel made a perfect landing, with her engines cut dead, on the choppy waters of Kai Tak Bay.

Both the Pan-American and the C.N.A.C. airways executives had no comments to make regarding future plans for the linking of Hong Kong with other aviation points. Mr. Juan Trippe, however, consented to say a few words. "VERY PLEASANT"

"We are delighted to arrive here in Hong Kong at the end of our 8,200-mile trip from the United States," Mr. Trippe said. "I am unable to say when we shall inaugurate the passenger service from Manila to Hong Kong."

Mr. Trippe added that his concern was very pleased with the arrangements which were concluded with the Imperial Airways for linking Hong Kong with the south.

Mr. and Mrs. Trippe, with Mr. R. A. Lord, will leave Hong Kong to-day by the R.M.A. Dorado to make ship connection at Singapore.

"ENGLAND NOT SO FREE"

What German Thinks

"Free" England does not exist in the eyes of Count Pueckler, German Press correspondent in London, who says the Englishman has been trained from childhood to "think it a crime to be different."

"If, in other countries, freedom of the individual is restricted by laws and prohibitions in England a much more fundamental method is used," he writes.

"That is the terror of an education which systematically destroys individualistic impulses and directs the thoughts and behaviour of the child so that it shall not be different from any other."

"It is useless and harmful when freedom is used in England to build up something in contradiction to a

NO SURRENDER TO JAPAN

Government Urged To Stand Firm

Eight Points Stressed In Public Manifesto

A message from Peiping states that ten thousand signatures are being solicited for a manifesto issued recently by sixty six Peiping educationalists urging the Government to stand firm in the Sino-Japanese negotiations.

Eight points are emphasised in the manifesto, namely:—

1. China's territorial and administrative rights must not be impaired;
2. The Government must give publicity to the progress in the negotiations;
3. Japanese interference in internal affairs must be opposed;
4. Movements fostered by outside forces must be resisted;
5. Japan's claims for a special position in North China is untenable;
6. Foreign attempts to control the natural resources of the country must be opposed;
7. Smuggling must be forcibly suppressed;

CHANG CHUN-KAWAGOE TALKS

Shanghai, Oct. 29.
It is exclusively learned that discussions at the sixth meeting between General Chang Chun, Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mr. Kawagoe, Japanese Ambassador to China, were confined to the question of a joint Red-defence in North China and the establishment of a special region in the North.

In view of the stern attitude of the Chinese, Mr. Kawagoe is understood to have made the following concessions:

91ST BIRTHDAY COMMEMORATED

400 RELATIVES FOREGATHER

Mr. Li Nam Chuen's
Memory Honoured

Over 400 people were present at the Cecil Hotel yesterday in commemoration of the 91st birthday of the late Mr. Li Nam Chuen, who was a well-known rice merchant at the Nam Pak Hong and a tea exporter.

Pomp and ceremonial, in typical Chinese fashion traditional of a ceremony of this nature was observed by Dr. Li Sung, a surviving son and his family, and the numerous other relatives of the deceased.

With countless "San Cheung" and "Du Luen" made of silk cloth with various words of congratulations hung all over the walls the dining hall of the Hotel presented a gay and bright atmosphere reminding one of the colourful traditional scene typical of Chinese celebration. The feature of attraction was at the altar where a huge painted photo of the late Mr. Li Nam Chuen was hung up on the centre, decorated with coloured lights and floral adornment. There were no less than 200 baskets of flowers presented by relatives and friends with congratulations and best wishes to his descendant.

WHAT NEXT FOR HUMANITY?

Interesting Address By Mr. Paul

SCIENCE WILL DEVELOPE

Speaking on the subject, "What Next for humanity?" at the weekly meeting of the Tascosopical Society held in the Mianuk Lodge yesterday evening, Mr. D. K. Paul said that the next 100 years would be one of speculation. Nobody seemed to know what will happen but he thought, regrettable as it seemed, one of the biggest questions in the world to-day was that of war.

There was knowledge, he said, that the war would be the most tremendous catastrophe that could happen to mankind. There would be two things that would cause the war and he referred in particular to the prior claim of land and the monetary system as they had it to-day. He had the keenest sympathy for countries who wished to develop as much as they possibly could but were denied doing so.

PARAMOUNT NEEDS
"Science is going to develop tremendously in the next hundred years," he said. "Especially I think the science of transportation and medical science and chemistry because they are the paramount needs of the world to-day."

The speaker said that when it does come to war the longer it is delayed the more dangerous it would be for humanity. He did

PARIS-SAIGON AIR RACE

Attempt Abandoned By Last Machine

Baars, Oct. 29.
The last contestants in the Paris-Saigon air race abandoned the flight after reaching here. One engine of the machine was out of action, the repair to which would entail considerable time, and Challe and Brill, the pilots of the machine, therefore decided to give up the attempt.—

A Correction

We take this, the earliest opportunity, of correcting an error which occurred in our reporting of the sinking of a ketch off the China coast. Our report, which appeared in a similar position to this correction, stated that the ketch Induna Star, constructed at the Kowloon docks, with Lt. Commander Roy Kendall in charge, had sunk and that the cook had been drowned.

Our reporter misunderstood his informant and reported the sinking of the Induna Star instead of the ketch Aracataca.

We apologise for having so grossly misled our readers on a matter of such primary news interest.—

"GOOD TRIP"

Induna Star Reaches Zamboanga

AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

According to a cable received yesterday by Gibo, Livingston and Co., Ltd., Hong Kong, the ketch Induna Star has arrived at Zamboanga three days ahead of schedule.

The message states that the ketch made a "good trip."

This message has caused great gratification to the builders in Hong Kong.

"Safety First" Campaign

Ambitious Plans

LAST WEEK IN NOVEMBER

The last week in November will be given over to a Safety First Campaign conducted by the Traffic Department of the Hong Kong Police, and every effort is being made to make the campaign a most comprehensive one staged in the Colony.

Interviewed yesterday, Mr. K. W. Bidmead, Assistant Superintendent of the Police, said that the same plans would be enforced during the campaign as last year.

FILM TO BE SCREENED

A film will be made picturing new features of good driving and the prevention of accidents, and it will be shown at all theatres. Later the same film will be shown in the schools and public places.

Handbills depicting the obvious mistakes of drivers will also be distributed, while poster exhibition will be granted to several firms in the Colony if they allow half of the picture to be given to a Safety First pictorial slogan.

DEATH OF MR. D. RUMJAHN

Demise Follows Closely Upon His Wife's

FAMILY'S SEVERE BLOW

Local sporting circles suffered a severe loss with the death of Mr. D. Rumjahn, who passed away at 2.30 p.m. yesterday at his residence, No. 139 Wong Nei Cheong Road. The late Mr. Rumjahn was the well-known local tennis player, and uncle of S. A. Rumjahn, ex-champion in the local tennis tournament.

The deepest sympathy is extended to his family and relatives in their bereavement.

The deceased was a prominent member of the Craigengower Cricket Club lawn bowls team, which won the shield three years in succession. He took part in many major tournaments in this sphere of sport but was not successful in annexing the Open title.

The late Mr. Rumjahn was also a keen fishing enthusiast. His demise follows closely upon the death of his wife Mrs. Fatima Rumjahn, who passed away on Wednesday, after a brief illness.

Reasons why 'MANSION' is so economical

'Mansion' being a highly concentrated wax polish, only very little is needed to give a mirror-like brilliance, to a large floor surface.

'Mansion' the preservative polish, lengthens the life of Linoleum.

Because 'Mansion' gives such a lasting brilliance, floors need less frequent polishing.

Autumn And Winter Dresses

Molyneux's autumn and winter dresses set the fashion of evening simplicity. He has made long, slim frocks which button down the front to the hem with bone buttons, and have turned-back collars, open necks, long tight sleeves, and pockets on the hips. No belts are worn. In red velvet, brown, or black, these dresses are right for a fireside evening at home. For something more ceremonious there is the long slim satin dress, as tight as possible and not reaching quite to the floor, with a pointed neck opening, back and front, no sleeves, or short, loose sleeves of tulle, and, quite apart, caught round the waist by a narrow band, a very full tulle over-skirt which sweeps backwards to a wide train, deeply box-pleated and slim about the hips. This opens in front to show the satin skirt.

A gracious frock in this collection is in poplar-gold taffeta, with the full skirt all puffed and gathered about the knees and to the wide hem. There are dresses of almond or dark olive green with loose half-length jackets, low round necklines, and cords and tassels round the waist. 'Nutria' is the right fur to go with this colour and the material may be duvetyn. Black woollen ensembles of dress and jacket, close-fitting or loose, have bright green cords and tassels about the throat. In to the neckline of a jacket with no collar and with a very shallow point in front, is tucked a bright little scarf, with no ends showing. Molyneux cuts black crepe dresses in front with tailored precision and buttons them about the waist, above and below. From the centre button an over-skirt is cut away to fall full towards the back over a very slim, long underskirt which may be slit at the hem. He has no startlingly low-cut bodices. Invariably the back is covered well above the waistline and in some dresses it is covered to the nape of the neck. High bodices are slit down the middle of the back. For the evening there is a white ermine loose coat, half length, or a long blue woollen coat, lined with ruby-red velvet.

Esther Meyer, the milliner, shows sporting hats with brims which dip back and front. A blue felt hat has a square of red leather as trimming, through which is thrust a little silver golf club. A green felt hat with a flower-pot crown and closely turned-back brim has a belt and buckle of red suede running round it. To wear with a black dress and jacket there is a boat-shaped violet felt hat with a sweeping blue feather set in a slit in front. Toggles of felt, velvet, and other soft materials are trimmed with feathers, wings, and 'petersham' rosettes, usually set about the front, as when a brown velvet toque is trimmed with red and blue shot feathers shaped like a fan and set slanting across the front. There are also bonnets fitted to the back of the head and trimmed low down with rosettes, wing-shaped draperies, veils, and feathers. Tall fur caps are made to match other furs.

NEW COLOUR MIXTURES

Moss green is very much to the fore; so are lime green and the real Victorian olive shade, one of fashion's first favourites, also a bronze-green tint which looks well in all the new jersey materials for night and day. Then there is the vast red range. Deep, bright carnation shades are wonderful for the new uncrushable rayon velvets. A deep clove in velvet mixes admirably with falls of a dull purple tint. Magenta is a good colour for taffeta or velvet.

A designer of note uses peacock-blue crepe and orange taffeta together in an exotic looking negligee.

The Edwardian and Victorian 'comebacks' in colours are eminently suited to the new vogues that are now rendered so much more attractive by modern methods of weaving, dyeing and by really artistic treatment.

It certainly may be called a 'rich' season. In fact it seems rather as if designers are anticipating the glamour of Coronation clothes. However, daring and gay 'as winter fashions are, exaggeration will be avoided. Simplicity of cut and restraint in trimmings are very necessary when fashion plunges into an orgy of lovely colours and fabrics.

Rayon and all the metal weaves are in themselves so decorative that they do not necessitate any further elaboration.

What Louise Latimer Wears

This petite heroine of 'Dancer Bunn', and also of the current 'Grand Jury' from HKO Radio, has in her wardrobe many striking costumes adapted to wear by the smaller woman. At left is a printed silk gown in lavender and wood violet floral design against a white background, with rousamer net covering the skirt. At right is a silver lame ensemble with an elaborate fur collar on the jacket. The jacket can be removed to show an extremely décolleté gown.

SWAGGER SKIRTS

An Autumn Need

Swagger coats are easy garments, and pleasant to wear. They provide suitable and sufficient covering on many occasions in town, car, or country, but they are not adequate when different kinds of occasions must be combined in one 'outing.'

This is especially the case when the days suddenly grow chilly. When we go to town we hesitate to bring out either the new winter coat so early or the old winter coat on days of revealing brightness. The comfortable swagger coat that has been a standby all through the summer is still warm enough on the shoulders. But with a light dress beneath it soon proves to be inadequate below the hips. On the other hand, if we put on a woollen frock, the added warmth of coat and dress-top increases a local temperature to the degree of discomfort. And a blouse and skirt with a swagger coat do not seem appropriate to late afternoon or to evening engagements.

WARM BUT WOOLLY

What is a woman to do if her smartest accessories tone best with her swagger coat when she wishes to stay on in town? Must she be too warm for daytime and too woolly for evening, or must she shiver through town in a largely unbecoming silk dress? What is needed, it seems, is a complementary swagger skirt of light but warm material; if lined with silk it could be made almost wind-proof. A skirt for such a purpose would have to open all the way down, fastening either by means of a lightning fastener or by buttons, and it would need some adjustable fullness so that it would hang well when wrapped around the waist above a silk dress. It should contain as little stuff as possible, so that it could easily be stowed away on removal just before its wearer went on to a theatre or party.

With such a skirt as an additional garment, the life of the summer swagger coat might be indefinitely prolonged. The upper part of an average 'afternoon' frock of, say, figured crepe de Chine would appear as a smart blouse when the rest of the frock was covered with a dark skirt, and after the skirt had been unbuttoned or unzipped the whole frock would come into its own in a warm and duly festive atmosphere. A swagger skirt would also be a good accompaniment to any of the short fur coats now popular; they too are not used as often as they might be when the days are cold and their owners must arrive somewhere in light dresses.

A swagger skirt could, after making its wearer seemly and comfortable during a strenuous afternoon's shopping or going to meetings, and remaining out of sight during the succeeding evening, serve still another purpose. It could be used as a rug over the knees of its owner if she were taken home in a car.

IMPROVE YOUR LOOKS

Now That The Dancing Season Is Here Again

The girl who goes dancing needs special toilet aids and treatments if she is to look her best until the evening is over.

At this time of the year her shoulders and back will probably require extra attention because they may still bear marks of summer upon them.

They will need three treatments: First, a bleaching preparation should be applied, then a cream to soften the skin, and finally a toning lotion.

A USEFUL AID

For a whitening aid a lemon cream may be used. To make it extra strong ten drops of lemon juice may be added to half an ounce of the cream. The cream should be placed in a mortar and the juice beaten in, and then about ten grains of prepared calamine dusted in. This aid should be used for three or four nights and left on until morning.

A cold cream must next be used each night, and well rubbed in; this too should be left on until the morning. A lotion to tighten the pores is used finally as the two creams will have made them slack.

To improve the appearance of the elbows a little of the lemon cream can be spread upon lint. Place this over the elbows and keep in place by a figure of eight bandage. This should be a nightly treatment, for two or three nights, to be effective.

TO REFRESH YOU

To revive tired feet before the dance, a piece of boracic acid lint can be dipped into warm water, then placed over the feet, which should be slightly raised on a pillow. After about ten minutes the feet will feel much fresher. If the heels are at all rubbed a little vaseline should be rubbed over them.

A satisfactory dusting powder for the feet can be prepared by adding ten grains of powdered borax, and 20 grains of orris root to two drachms of French chalk, and well blending the three ingredients together. This simple aid may be used for the palms of the hands as well.

Formality In Afternoon Dress

The tailored semi-sports dress which last season did duty from noon till dinner-time is being displaced this winter by the more formal afternoon dress. This new formal dress is simple in line and depends on its fabric and detail for its distinction. Soft black wools are embroidered in a scattered design of dull black beads; fine wools or crepes may be trimmed with braiding or with velvet or satin appliques. Dresses in these materials have high close fitting or swathed necklines; pencil-straight almost tailored wool frocks have small turnover collar made entirely of beads or gold sequins. The same type of frock in heavy matt silk with a plain or cloqué finish is absolutely devoid of trimming and makes an effective background to a necklace of many rows of pearls and a matching bracelet. Sleeves have a certain shoulder width but fit closely to the wrist or to just below the elbow.

The newest silhouette shows a high moulded waistline with a definite Empire effect. The bust is defined by darts, tucks, and gaugings, a wide belt often being added to accentuate the line. Another new line has back fullness on the skirt, leaving the front and sides slim and smooth. The fullness is given by gaugings, cartridge pleats, and flat fin-like tucks. As a contrast there are dresses which have a slim straight back and cleverly draped front fullness. Both these styles demand a small waistline and slender fitted bodice. Yokes which extend in a cap effect over the top of the sleeve give the fashionable shoulder width. They are in sheer materials, braided or embroidered in beads or sequins.

For the cocktail hour metal fabrics are used to make tailored suits and plain slim dresses of street length. They have belts and small trimming details in velvet accentuating the coloured thread of the fabric. A black and bold lacquered satin with a dull finish in a design of small ships and flowers makes a slim skirt and tailored peplum jacket. The colour accent is given by a bright cyclamen scarf of chiffon. On a simple dress of blue and silver lamé with a small turn-down collar and short sleeves there is a full pleated skirt and a belt of wide blue velvet. Two contrasting materials look well in redingote frocks, as when a rich metal material is posed over satin or velvet over cloth. Tunic dresses with front or back fullness are made in cre materials cut high to the throat with flattened shoulder width. These are in a variety of bright shades with leather belts in strong colour contrast. One such afternoon dress has a pale cyclamen crepe tunic over an under-skirt of a much deeper shade.

Informal dinner dresses are in face cloth and matt velvet. They are cut on severely tailored lines, with plain set-in sleeves, turn-up collars, and buttons all down the front. A black dinner gown, very plain and severe is worn with a little sleeveless coat of gold lamé or with a fitted jacket of furnishing tapestry in soft antique colourings. These plain frocks and jacket dresses have displaced the dinner suits of last season save for the style which is adapted from the swallow-tails of the Regency period, a fashion which is new but not generally becoming.

DAY & EVENING FASHIONS

All manner of fashions have appeared in new forms. Models of every age, and period have been adapted to suit any occasion. Choice is bewildering and difficult; as soon as one has a fixed idea that we like Edwardian elegance we are attracted by a little 1935 ensemble of a masculine trend, feminised, possibly, by old-world touches of lace and embroidery.

The charm of the latest sporting tweed, with checked waistcoat and a new stock, may appeal, and then we find ourselves longing for a soft angora tunic, muslin jabot and a loose coat of corduroy velvet.

We pick out a tight pleated skirt and jumper with a cape coat, and as suddenly feel a desire for one of the new swinging short skirts and tiny cut-away jackets. And so the fun goes on.

Daring revivals in colour are delightful. Queen Anne chints inspires one designer, whilst another haunts the magnificence of medieval days in stiff brocades and new weaves in glittering laces. These suit the flowing skirts and stiff girdles. One meets the rich yellow satin associated with the long-trained, tight-skirted, higher waistline, and the crackling tafetas and broches of the nineties.

which compose polonaises and tunic. The trained velvet dinner-dress, so Edwardian in its elegance, is produced not only in black, but in rich autumnal shades ranging from unripe blackberry to prune and medlar; also a tangerine, lacquer-red, yellow, and bottle-green.

A tailored trend for evening is the latest ultra-modern effort. At its best it possesses some delightful feminine accessories, such as a posy flowers in the button-hole and a decorative belt and softly pleated lace shirt or satin front.

Black as the foundation is the standby for the most useful type of cinema ensemble. Sometimes the skirt is of satin or velvet, worn with masculine mess-jacket of thick cloqué, faille, or even broadcloth. All-silk is useful and changes can be rung in the blouse.

Especially in winter do we appreciate the dinner dress that can be worn comfortably under a fur coat. It must be the sort of garment that can look smart and suitable from five o'clock onwards.

How many women after the afternoon bridge-party, go on to a cinema, and do not want the worry and expense of going home to change?

Colours and textures are gay and soft in shade and finish. The angora frock, with its matching or contrasting cardigan or a newer found house-coat, has, for out-of-doors, its cosy top coat of tweed, suede, leather, or a rough fur.

The classic dark tailored suit of fur-trimmed broadcloth is useful alike for town and country. Tweeds and sweaters, slacks or pleated kilts may have their place in a dress scheme. Wool is still somewhat of a novelty for the country evening dress, but the new semi-dinner frock, in velvet or velveteen, is more flattering and warmer for winter.

Evening tunics can be gay and useful for afternoon occasions, also when worn over plain cloth skirts.

SPAIN AND THE
POWERSNon-Intervention
Problem

London, Oct. 28.

Despite fears of defection in Russia and Portugal from the International Non-Intervention Committee the organisation remained intact after a six-hour meeting today, which was devoted to passionate accusations and counter-attacks arising out of the consideration of recent notes, including Portugal's, which asserted that the Soviet's influence in Spanish affairs was responsible for the civil war.

Meanwhile, the text of the Russian elucidation of its note to the Non-Intervention Committee has been issued. It states the Soviet is prepared to discuss the proposal to the President of the Committee, Lord Plymouth, that Portuguese ports be controlled to prevent arms reaching the insurgents, and adds that control might be extended to Spanish ports and to the Spanish frontiers.

The Soviet does not object to the establishment of control ports and points along the frontier not occupied by the rebels, providing the consent of the legitimate Spanish Government is obtained.

Russia proposes to begin immediately the discussion of its supervised neutrality proposal.

It is understood that the British, German and Italian representatives on the Non-Intervention Committee are still of the opinion that the Russian elucidation of its first note fails to clarify the situation completely. Moreover, the Committee has accepted the Italian and Portuguese replies to Russia's charges of breaches of neutrality as satisfactory, though the Russian representative, M. Malysky, objected in both instances. —Reuter.

FULL COMMITTEE
MEET

London, Oct. 28.

The Chairman's sub-committee of the International Committee for the application of an agreement regarding non-intervention in Spain, met at the Foreign Office this morning, and the full committee met this afternoon at three o'clock, and was still in session after a short adjournment at 8 p.m. It was understood that the committee would have before it the communication from the Russian Government regarding the Russian note, which was discussed at last Friday's meeting of the Committee.

The International Committee for the application of the agreement regarding non-intervention in Spain, following a meeting of the Chairman's sub-committee this morning, sat for six hours at the Foreign Office, rising at nine o'clock. —British Wireless.

AERO-ENGINE
PRODUCTIONLord Nuffield's
Criticism

London, Oct. 28.
Lord Nuffield called on the Prime Minister at No. 10 Downing Street this afternoon.

Parliament reassembles tomorrow and in both Houses statements will be made on the Air Ministry's plans for the production of aero-engines in connection with the Government's defence programme, in the light of the disagreement between the Ministry and Lord Nuffield revealed in a statement published by him on October 22.

It is expected that the statements will indicate that the misunderstandings which had arisen, have been cleared away in the last few days.

Meantime for the convenience of members of Parliament a note on the policy of His Majesty's Government in relation to the production of aero-engines, has been issued as a White Paper which explains the factors which have governed the Air Ministry's policy in the past and the modifications necessitated, first by the expansion of the Air Force provided for in the supplementary estimate presented to Parliament in July, 1935, and secondly, by the acceleration and extension of the programme announced last March.

SHADOW SCHEME

Of matters in dispute between Lord Nuffield and the Air Ministry on which has been aroused chief public interest, was doubts expressed by the former as to the wisdom and practicability of the form given to the so-called "Scheme for shadow aero-engine industry."

The White Paper shows that the Air Ministry adopted a plan by which factories are to be established under the management of seven companies, whose co-operating would produce different groups of parts and assembly. Tests would be undertaken in two factories only, after consultation with and upon the advice of the committee of representatives of the seven firms and the Bristol Aeroplane Company.

Later when Lord Nuffield's criticism became known, Lord Swinton, the Secretary for Air and Lord Weir, who was advising him, the matter was again submitted to the committee and its Chairman, Sir Herbert now Lord Austin assured Lord Swinton that after a most careful consideration, the committee was of opinion that, the only safe, practical and most efficient plan was for each firm to manufacture one section of engine parts only.

Subsequent to the publication of Lord Nuffield's statement, the air engine committee met again and an appendix to the White Paper gives a letter from Lord Austin to the Secretary for Air dated October 26, which informs him that "all the firms were represented and they unanimously wished me to tell you they believe in the 'shadow scheme,' they are confident it can be made a success and they are going to see it through. The buildings for the various factories are rapidly taking shape and upon enquiry, I could find no hold-up or stoppage in the work connected with the purchase of machinery, tools and fixtures." —British Wireless.

KING'S BUSY DAY

London, Oct. 28.

The Duke of Saxe Coburg Gotha and party of German ex-service men at present in England, watched the changing of the guard from the forecourt at Buckingham Palace this morning. After the ceremony, the Duke of Saxe Coburg-Gotha was received in audience by the King. This afternoon the Duke of Connaught who is shortly going to Bath for the winter, called at the Palace and spent some time with His Majesty. Among other visitors received later by the King was Mr. N. J. Jordan, on his appointment as High Commissioner in London for New Zealand. —British Wireless.

that the Non-Intervention Agreement has proved ineffective in its operation," for the restoration "to democratic Spain of the full commercial rights, including the purchase of 'landed goods,' to enable Spanish people to bring their heroic struggle for liberty and democracy to a victorious conclusion. —British Wireless.

ITALIAN CHARGES

London, Oct. 28.

The Italian Note listing twenty cases of violation of the Non-Intervention Agreement by Soviet Russia, was submitted at a meeting of the Non-Intervention Sub-Committee on Wednesday afternoon.

Cases cited include the landing of cargo and war materials, disguised as foodstuffs on October 19, in Alicante harbour, by the Russian freighter "Neva," landing of 25 Russian aeroplanes at Madrid on September 13, and the delivery of six dismantled planes at Alicante in the beginning of October.

An energetic protest was lodged by the Italian delegates for alleged indiscretions and violation of the secrecy of the sessions. Recommendations were made to the Main Committee that greater publicity be given the proceedings and that even excerpts from the addresses be made available to the press.

Following the meeting of the Sub-Committee, the Main Committee also met, in order to consider the Russian reply to the question of whether she considers herself bound by the Non-Intervention Agreement.

The contents of the latest Russian Note were not revealed but it is announced that Britain is preparing a further list of Russian violations covering a period of several weeks, including material and support rendered to the Madrid Government as well as the activity of Russian agents in Spain. This will, in all probability, be submitted to the Committee if the Russian Note fails to clear up the vagueness of "hints" existing in their declarations. —Transmission News Service.

"LADY TUBBS"

The strenuous excitement of a Long Island fox hunt is a part of "Lady Tubbs," the rollicking Universal comedy which is now playing at the King's Theatre with Alice Brady starred and Douglass Montgomery and Anita Louise featured.

Horses bear their riders after the baying hounds at a breakneck-speed, leaping fences and ditches in mad scramble to be the first one at the kill, and thus receive the fox's "brush" as a souvenir of the chase.

But the trophy is awarded to Miss Brady, a camp cook masquerading as an English noblewoman, who can't even ride and is unceremoniously dumped by her fiery horse in a convenient pile of brush. The hounds happen to catch the fox as it passes her an hour later, and the astonished "Lady" is claimed as the greatest rider of them all—by everyone except a snippy young society girl who sees an opportunity to clinch her marriage to the household.

"Lady Tubbs" was directed by Croeland and important roles in support of Alice Brady are played by June Clayworth, Alan Mowbray, Hedda Hopper and many others. The original story was written as a novel by Homer Croy.

"FOLLOW THE FLEET"

"The Navy's on shore leave" means merrymaking and romance in any harbour city, but it heralds the gayest days of the year in old San Francisco. And the unrestrained excitement brought by the tidal wave of blue to the Bay City has now been translated into song, dance, comedy and tangled love by Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers with the help of Irving Berlin in "Follow the Fleet," at the Majestic Theatre.

The singing starts even before the dreadnaughts hit the Golden Gate, with Astaire serving up Harriet Hilliard, in the role of Ginger's repressed school-teacher sister. Loses her heart to Randolph Scott, a "dozen-girls-in-every-port" pal of Astaire's.

Mark Sandrich, who guided Astaire and Rogers in "The Gay Divorcee" and "Top Hat," has again directed them. Pandro S. Berman produced.

BOURNEMOUTH BANS TWO PLAYS

Lawrence And Coward

Noel Coward's play "Pamela" and D. H. Lawrence's "The Lady of the Shalott" are not suitable for Bournemouth audiences. This is the decision of Mr. G. H. Barker, manager of the Bournemouth Pavilion, where the plays were to have been presented, and a ban has been placed on them. Dame Sybil Inorndike and her company were to have begun a week's run with the plays on October 12. Her husband (Mr. Lewis Casson) and her son and daughter were to have appeared in the productions.

Dame Sybil's visit to Bournemouth has been cancelled. Explaining his action, which is supported by Alderman J. R. Edgecombe, Deputy Mayor and Chairman of the Pavilion Committee, Mr. Barker said, when the engagement of the company was booked, the names of the plays were not known. When these were available the script was asked for, and was obtained.

"I read the script," he stated, "and I was definitely of opinion that, much as we would have liked Dame Sybil to come to the Pavilion, it was not possible to permit the production of these two plays. I do not say these were not suitable for any other theatres, but they are not suitable for the Bournemouth Pavilion, which is a Corporation Pavilion, and a place where people have the right to be able to bring their wives and young children at any time without hearing anything to which objection could be taken."

ENJOYED BY EASTBOURNE
When a "Morning Post" representative telephoned Dame Sybil Thorndike at the Devonshire Park Theatre, Eastbourne, she was actually playing in "Pamela." A full house was thoroughly enjoying the play.

I suppose these plays are rather too modern for Bournemouth," Mr. Lewis Casson said. "Bournemouth, perhaps, is a little old-fashioned, but if the provinces are to be served, it is no good catering only for the old ladies. When the old ladies die, as they must, Bournemouth will have to find audiences for their theatres, and the audiences of the future will not hold the same views."

The King, as Prince of Wales, saw the first production of "Pamela" at the Phoenix Theatre, London, in January.

Previously, the plays had been shown with success at Hammer-smith, Wimbledon and Bristol, and later Dame Sybil Thorndike and Mr. Lewis Casson will appear in them at Southsea.

THE "CORONATION" LORD MAYOR

Sir G. Broadbridge Chosen

Alderman Sir George Broadbridge was elected Lord Mayor of London for the coming year.

The Guildhall ceremony was preceded by a service held at the Church of St. Lawrence Jewry, conducted by the Rector, the Rev. A. Lombard. In an address the Lord Mayor's chaplain (Rev. Charles Clark) suggested that meetings of the common Council should open with prayer.

At the subsequent proceedings in the Guildhall the Common Serjeant read a list of eight names of aldermen who had served office of Sheriff and were eligible for the Mayoralty.

When the name of Sir George Broadbridge was read there was a shout of "All." Then Sir Henry Twyford's name was called and the cry was "Next year." To the remaining six names the answer was "Later." The result of the Livery-men's vote was reported to the Lord Mayor (Sir Percy Vincent), and this return to the Great Hall of the Lord Mayor and Sir George Broadbridge walking side by side—a sign of the acceptance of the election—was greeted with cheers.

Sir George then declared his willingness to accept office.

Sir Robert Kindersley, thanking the retiring Lord Mayor on behalf of the Liverymen, described Sir Percy's visit to Canada as "the great adventure" of his year of office.

The retiring Lord Mayor replied briefly. "If I have satisfied you," he said, "then I am satisfied."

Formal thanks to the outgoing Sheriff were expressed by Lord Plender and Captain A. H. Morens. Sir George Broadbridge was formerly Deputy-Chairman of the Nigerian Chamber of Mines. He

A wealthy American who was born in Bolton, Lancashire, and left this country when a boy, walked into the offices of the King George Memorial Fund at the Mansion House, London recently, intending to give a donation of £240 to the fund.

"PAROLE"

Do you like drama that races and throbs, vibrates with human emotion, reaches way down deep into the hearts of men and women and gets their lives before you with flaming realism? Then you will want to see Universal's "Parole" at the Alhambra Theatre.

The romantic interest of the story revolves about the fact that the central character, under the strict terms of the parole which has freed him from prison, is prohibited from marrying until his full term has ended. He falls in love with a girl and they strive to find a solution to their problems.

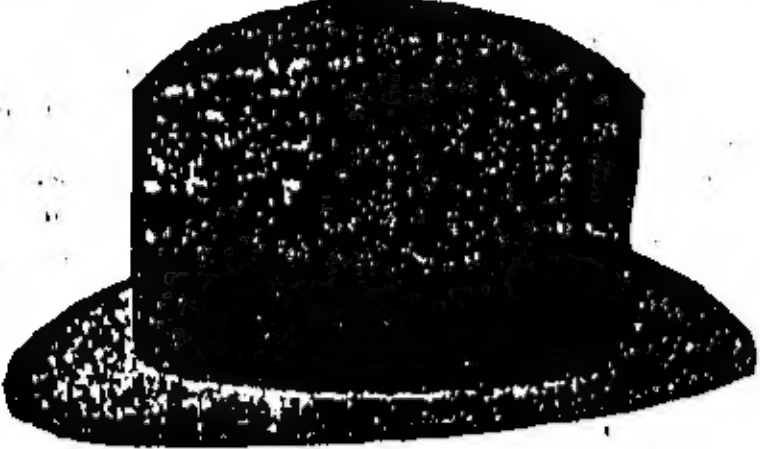

The picture reveals the abuses of a faulty parole system. It shows what happens when the wrong men are set free to commit new crimes.

You will be gripped by the stirring dramatic story that thunders and hammers and beats with terrific force. Men clamouring for freedom; rogues planning new schemes; traffickers seeking more profit; a turmoil of twisted minds and twisted lives, helped at last by one man who had the courage to find a clear path.

Woven through the whole narrative is a brave story that glows like a sunlit sea after a storm. A warm, natural love story, alive with the fire of youth.

The leading characters are portrayed by Henry Hunter and Ann Preston stage and radio stars, who make their screen debut after four years' on nation-wide networks. Other important roles are played by Alan Dinehart, Alan Baxter, Alan Hale, Frank Mitchell, Benton Churchill and Noah Berry, Jr.

THREE APPEALS DISMISSED

Heroin A Menace To Community

CHIEF JUSTICE'S FIRM STAND

Three appeals heard before a full Court of Appeal, comprising His Lordship, the Chief Justice, Sir Athol MacGregor, the Puisne Judge, Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden and Acting Puisne Judge, Mr. J. A. Fraser at the Supreme Court yesterday morning were dismissed. Three prisoners, Li Tung, Cheung Yiu, and Cheung San, represented by Mr. Leo D'Almada Jr., instructed by Mr. Macnamara, lodged the first appeal.

Mr. D'Almada said that the appeal was only against the sentence and not against the conviction, and that the evidence against the appellants was very slight.

ALL SENTENCED ALIKE

The prisoner who was charged as the first defendant and who said that he was the principal tenant of the premises where they were all arrested, received the same sentence as the others who were only his employees.

He added that the distinction should have been drawn at the Criminal Sessions by the Chief Justice.

At the Sessions that were held last month, the principal tenants received larger sentences than the others, and the distinction was clearly drawn then.

The evidence against the three appellants was that their hands had been stained, but none had been in the Colony for more than a few days.

The sum total of their statements was to the effect that they were only on the premises for these few days.

He concluded by saying that the court could exercise power in the matter, and submitted that a reduction should be made in the sentence.

"NOT WRONG IN PRINCIPLE"

Mr. M. J. Abbott, Assistant Crown Solicitor, replied by asking the Chief Justice to look at copies of a local paper issued on August 21, when His Lordship remarked that he would not be lenient on anyone who was found guilty of possession or the manufacture of heroin.

On Mr. D'Almada's formal objection, His Lordship said that he could not regard the paper in question as an authority, and sustained the objection.

Mr. Abbott continued that the amount of evidence against prisoners convicted could not regulate the sentence, and that the sentence imposed was not manifestly excessive and not wrong in principle.

In rebuttal, Mr. D'Almada replied that the evidence showed only a small degree of participation.

SERIOUSNESS OF OFFENCE

The Chief Justice answered that there was a decided growth in the manufacture and marketing of heroin in the community, and that in view of the fact that the appellants were represented in Court, he felt that there was no necessity to reiterate what had so recently been said in that Court.

He desired to say how very serious he regarded participation in that type of offence.

It was the opinion of the court and they had arrived at the same conclusion, that the sentences passed were not an infringement on the basic principles under which they were bound to act. The appeal was dismissed. The sentences were to run from the date of conviction.

CHANGED HIS PLEA

Leung Yau-on, who was sentenced on May 18 to four years imprisonment when he was apprehended and charged with returning from life banishment, made an unsuccessful appeal. He was not legally represented.

Leung now told His Lordship that he had only come to the Colony to exhume his mother's remains.

The Chief Justice said that the Court was not favourably disposed to any person who changed his story and dismissed the appeal.

BETRAYED BY FRIEND

Ho Wah, who was convicted on June 24 for having in his possession certain counterfeit moulds, also made an unsuccessful appeal. He said that a so-called friend brought the charge against him, and that he considered the sen-

ANOTHER HEROIN FACTORY

For the prosecution, Revenue Officer A. W. Grimmitt stated that in company with Mr. Taylor, Government Monopoly Analyst, and a party of Chinese revenue officers, he raided the premises and found it was a heroin factory with all the paraphernalia used for the manufacture of heroin pills.

The defendants were questioned and when asked who was the principal tenant, Yu Yin stated that he was and that the master had gone to Canton. Yung Yau stated that she was employed as an amah on the floor.

Mr. Grimmitt remarked, "that prior to entering the premises Yung Yau came to the peep-hole and was seen to close the doors of two cubicles before she came to open the main door."

Evidence was taken following which Yu Yin was committed for trial at the next Criminal Sessions. The woman was discharged.

CENTRAL BRITISH SCHOOL

Satisfactory Year's Working

ANNUAL PRIZE DAY

The first prize giving day of the Central British School since their recent occupation of the new building in the vicinity of the Kowloon Hospital, was largely attended by parents and friends of the pupils.

In presenting his report, the Rev. G.E.S. Updell, Headmaster revealed a satisfactory year's working in spite of handicaps, experienced in the old building, and made an appeal for parents to co-operate more fully with the School staff in the interests of their children.

Among those present were Mr. E. J. Edwards (Secretary of the Board of Education), Mr. T. R. Rowell (Inspector of English Schools), Mr. G. F. Rees, Mrs. B. Wylie and Mrs. G. E. S. Updell.

ANNUAL REPORT

Addressing the gathering, the Headmaster said:-

"Mr. Wylie, Ladies and Gentlemen. It is with great pleasure that I present the report for the year 1935-6, the last year in our old school. Despite the crowded conditions and the impossibility of sometimes getting a whole form into its room, the year has been one of satisfactory progress due to the excellent spirit prevailing and the determined efforts of the children to co-operate with the Staff in making the best of difficult situations. The least I can do is to express my appreciation of the spirit of the children and of the untiring efforts of the teachers. The result was that we were able to carry on until the very last day of term, and produce results which are a credit to any school."

EXAMINATION RESULTS

We had one honours in the Hong Kong School Certificate Examination, two distinctions in English, one distinction in French, and altogether five passes. Also five out of seven candidates passed the Cambridge School Certificate Examination. But examination results, though important because they are the entry into many walks of life, are not by any means the hall mark of a school. The character of the children and their ability to fit into the corporate life of the community are among other things extremely important, and pupils who have passed through the school are a credit to us, many of them now occupying important positions.

"During the year, visits were made by large parties of the children to the Kai Tak Aerodrome, The Hong Kong & Shanghai Bank, The Commercial Press printing works, and the "Dorado" when she brought the first scheduled air-mail from the Straits."

"The library has been very largely used, 30 books and more being taken out daily by the children, and a large number of periodicals of an educational nature are extensively read in the library itself. May I express the school's appreciation of the various gifts of books made throughout the year, and at the same time appeal for further gifts. The children read extensively and widely; we get no grant from Government for books, and gifts will therefore be very greatly appreciated."

SPORTING ACTIVITIES

"In sports we can play the game with anyone and lose well, although in cricket we had only five opportunities of showing our 'losing' ability. The 1st XI had a very successful season playing 21 games, the opponents including local League teams, Naval Units, Army Companies, and the R.A.F. Sixteen games in all were won and 5 lost. Our only inter-school games were with the Diocesan Boys' School who were defeated twice. In Football 17 matches were played, out of which 8 were won, 3 drawn, and six lost.

There was a very marked improvement in the standard of the Girls' Hockey, and they did well to win the Junior Seven-a-side Trophy and finish third in the Junior Hockey League. It is very gratifying to notice that girls leaving this school are taking Team places in so many of the Colony's Ladies Clubs. The Netball results were poor due mostly to more concentration on Hockey, but with our grounds so close an improvement is hoped for this year. Results were as follows:-

Hockey: Played 8; won 5; lost 2; drew 1.
Netball: Played 20; won 2; lost 17; drew 1.

"The Annual Athletic Sports were held in March; the House Championship being again won by Chocolate House. In the Inter-School Athletic Sports, E. Rodgers won the 1500 metres event. There was no organized swimming during the year, but the Annual Swimming Sports were held at the Y.M.C.A. in July; the House Championship being won easily by Chocolate House."

ing the year, but the Annual Swimming Sports were held at the Y.M.C.A. in July; the House Championship being won easily by Chocolate House."

GIRLS AND DANCES

"On July 17th, we had our final assembly in the old building, transfer having already commenced to our new home where we now have all the facilities of a first-class school, and I should like to appeal to parents to co-operate with us and eliminate some of the handicaps we have previously experienced. Perhaps it would be helpful to state more specifically what I mean."

"During last winter some girls from the school went out to a public dance on a Wednesday night during term. It is frankly impossible to expect them to be fresh and clearheaded for the following day's work. If it was only the girls themselves who suffered, it would be the parents' responsibility, but the whole class suffers which is an entirely different matter."

Or again: some children attended the 9.30 p.m. cinema show on a Sunday night; it was impossible for the children concerned to get to bed before midnight. It is hardly playing the game to expect them to be alert and steady on the Monday morning. Quite a number of letters have been received from parents asking for their children to be excused homework because, of parties, etc. It is my duty to point out that a full education is provided for the children, and if you entrust your child's education to us, then it is incumbent upon you to see that nothing is allowed to interfere with the complete enjoyment of the facilities available. May I quote Sir Richard Livingstone in his presidential address to the Education Section of the British Association this year?

"THE FINAL GOAL"

"The final goal of education is not the capacity to earn one's bread or to live in a community, though these are included in it, but the making of human beings. Body, character, and, in the widest sense, reason, make the man. A body undeveloped, a character weak or debased, a mind unaware of the universe which we inhabit or of the achievements and ideals of mankind, proclaim the failure of education and walk the world as a standing reproach to it."

THANKS EXPRESSED

I find it impossible to conceive of any child obtaining a better education than is available here, and we ask that parents will see that nothing is allowed to interfere with the full enjoyment of it, both lessons, sports and homework. I know I have the full support of the parents in expressing thanks to the Staff for the great interest taken in the individual children and their untiring efforts to give them the best.

The thanks of the school are due to the Chairman and Committee of St. Andrew's Society for the J.R.M. Smith Scholarship; the Manager of P. Hong Kong & Whampoa Dock Co., for the two Annual Scholarships; Mr. Ezra Abraham for the Ezra Abraham Scholarship; also to Lady MacGregor for a cup for the best "All Rounder" for girls; to the Central British Association for a cup for the best "All Rounder" for boys; and to "Anonymous" for a "Senior Games" Cup.

It is a great pleasure to us to have the honour of Mr. Wylie's presence here this morning; his interest in education in general and this school in particular is so well-known that any words from me are unnecessary, and I will now ask him to give away the certificates and prizes.

MR. WYLIE'S SPEECH

Following the Headmaster's annual report, Mr. B. Wylie distributed the prizes and addressed the students as follows:

"Mr. Updell, boys and girls, I have to thank you, Sir, in honouring me by asking me to distribute (Continued on Page 10)

REPULSE BAY TRAGEDY

Body Identified As American Visitor

MRS. E. M. CARRICK

The body of the European lady, which was found in Middle Beach, Repulse Bay at 4 p.m. on Wednesday was identified yesterday morning as that of Mrs. E. M. Carrick, resident of Repulse Bay Hotel.

Identification of the body was made at the Public Mortuary by Mr. J. Semmler, Manager of the Repulse Bay Hotel.

The deceased was a widow, aged 51 and was stated to be a regular visitor to Hong Kong from America. She first visited the Colony in 1929 with her husband, who is believed to have died shortly after their return to New York from the 1929 visit to the Far East.

She arrived in May this year, when after a brief stay at Repulse Bay Hotel, she visited Japan, for two months before returning to the Colony.

First intimation of the impending tragedy was obtained nine hours later—when the room boy reported at 1 a.m. yesterday that Mrs. Carrick had not returned to the hotel.

The Manager at once communicated with the police, but it was not until 10 a.m. yesterday that the body was identified.

The deceased was last seen alive by members of the hotel at 8.00 p.m. on Tuesday. She was dressed in evening clothes and appeared as if she was proceeding to a function.

POPPY DAY FUND

There are a large number of ex-Service men who are suffering from illnesses of a chronic nature, which makes them unsuitable for employment. With the limited funds available it is not possible to assist continuously, but these men can be assisted for periods of from three to four months during a year, and such help is usually given during the autumn and winter seasons, periods when aid is most desired, and which has proved of great benefit. During the past year £20,123 was expended in assisting ex-Service men under this scheme.

BRITISH SHIPBUILDING

On Wednesday we published on the front page of the "Daily Press" an epitome of the figures in Lloyd's Register which showed a striking improvement in British shipbuilding.

Analysing the figures, however, that improvement is not as reassuring as it appears if one compares the volume of business with pre-war days.

Let us consider the question.

At the close of 1932 the merchant shipping under construction in Great Britain and Ireland sank to the low level of 225,000 tons gross; a year later the figure rose to 382,000 tons; by the end of 1934 the amount had increased to 597,000 tons; and by last December the total was raised to 743,000 tons. Now the amount being built is as much as 929,000 tons, and it would be reasonable to think that by the end of the year the standard of 1,000,000 tons may be reached.

A more than fourfold increase by gradual stages within four years is important for a country for which shipbuilding means so much, but there are plenty of figures within the recent history of the industry to act as a brake on excessive satisfaction. For example, at the end of 1929 the merchant tonnage being built in these islands amounted to 1,560,000 tons, and in the year before the War the total was nearly 2,000,000 tons.

As compared with the returns for the June quarter, the present figures show a reduction of ten vessels and an increase of 80,000 tons. One exceptionally large ship is included in the present figures and was not in the earlier tables. Apparently this vessel is the sister ship to the Queen Mary. On the assumption that she is entered in the records at about 81,000 tons, the increase in construction during the quarter is fully explained by the preparations. Moreover the work started during the last three months, at 293,000 tons, exceeded the shipping launched by exactly 81,000 tons, and these figures again indicate the influence on the returns of one unusually large piece of shipbuilding.

No account is taken in these quarterly returns of naval construction, and, although estimates are not easy to form, it would be not unreasonable to think, converting the displacement tonnage of warships into the gross tonnage of merchant ships, that this now represents about 500,000 tons gross.

After allowing for the substantial reductions effected in recent years, it is likely that only between 50 and 60 per cent. of the berthing capacity of the British shipyards is now being used. Yet, since large numbers of men left the industry during the depression of recent years, a point has now been reached where, under present conditions, any further great and sudden expansion of work might involve the industry in awkward problems.

Prices for new ships have already advanced, but a large proportion of the work on new ships is entrusted to sub-contractors throughout the country; and doubtless builders would main-

JAPANESE MOVE
IN CHENG TUNational Government
Opposition

Shanghai, Oct. 29.

Much speculation has been aroused in diplomatic circles following the revelation that successful negotiations have been conducted between the Foreign Office and the French Embassy to change the title of the French consul at Chengtu to special commissioner of the French consulate at Chungking. The French consul is the only foreign diplomatic official stationed at the capital of Szechwan Province.

In view of the threatening developments arising from the decision of the Japanese Government to reopen its consulate-general at Chengtu, special significance is being attached to the move.

Some observers here see in the modification of the French agent's status a cautious gesture on the part of the National Government to forestall Japanese representations in connection with the projected reinstatement of the acting Japanese consul-general, Mr. Eichi Iwai in his office at Chengtu.

It is understood that the National Government is adamant in its opposition to the Japanese project on the ground that the inland key town is not a treaty port. — Union News.

ELECTRIC SUPPLY

According to an announcement appearing elsewhere in this issue, the China Light and Power Co., Ltd. will interrupt the electricity supply of the New Territories, except the Shatin Area, on Sunday at 2 p.m. The supply will be restored again before dark.

tain that the greater part of any increase they have obtained or are securing for their finished products has been, or will be, absorbed in higher prices for all the materials and manufactures they need.

The returns indicate that the improvement in British shipbuilding is attributable in the main to orders for the British Mercantile Marine. The tonnage now being built in British yards for foreign owners remains very small indeed, whereas only a few years ago it was a considerable contribution to the volume of work.

Certainly the decline cannot be explained by any deterioration in British craftsmanship, which is at least as fine as ever, but is caused by financial complications and arrangements over which the British builders themselves have no control.

The League of Nations is endeavouring to solve the major problems of world finance but so far no formula has been obtained. The problem is most perplexing, but though exchange rates may fluctuate, if craftsmanship remains steady, as Lloyd's returns demonstrate, there will always be an outlet for expert labour. For it should not be forgotten that the competition in shipbuilding was possibly even keener before the last world war than it has ever been since.

DOCTOR AS PATIENT'S
"SANCTUARY"Humanist In The Consulting-Room

"The doctor is a sanctuary, and the patient is to be protected not only against death and pain, but also against the quack who would batter on his infirmities, against his friends and, too often, against himself."

Lord Horder, the King's Physician, so described the relationship of doctor and patient when he spoke on the doctor as humanist, at the inaugural lecture to students of the Westminster Hospital Medical School, says the "Morning Post."

The relationship between doctor and patient was unique, he said, and only after years of experience could the doctor begin to appreciate what this relationship could mean in human affairs.

The body of the patient was sensitive enough in all conscience, but nothing needed a gentler approach than some of the minds with which they had to deal.

"The doctor must be able to utilise to a greater extent certain of the faculties which are common to all. The whole of a doctor's experience of humanity must be focussed on his patient. He must, as it were, be able to withdraw into the patient, taking his experience with him."

"HELP ME"

The patient, like the person of the King, was sacred. He had a divine right to the utmost that the doctor could give him, his training, his skill, his experience, his wisdom, his time, his physical and mental comfort.

"The patient's only credentials consist in the frank avowal: 'Doctor, I am a sick man; please help me.' This formula once honestly spoken, there must be no thought in the doctor's mind of who the patient is or what he is. It is sometimes the patient himself who fails to realise the tremendous simplicity of this contract."

Lord Horder said that the exploitation of instruments of precision, the elaboration of bacteriological and biochemical methods, the commercialisation of pharmacology, and the rapid sequence of new machinery in physiotherapy all contained good, but if they were not carefully they would be allowed to overlay and replace the most essential factor in the diagnosis and treatment of disease—namely, the personal contact of doctor and patient.

"The patient won't save himself from this happening," he added. "He has seen most of the rest of his life mechanised; why not medicine? His faith in a piece of apparatus in the doctor's room is pathetic. And standardisation thrills nearly as much as mechanisation."

"RULES" CRAZE

The doctrinaire attitude towards diet, adopted by certain pundits made a great appeal to many patients, who seemed to think that any day now medicine might discover standard diet. If, indeed, it had not already done so.

"I might easily multiply these vain hopes and stretchings out after the 'right' or standard rules of life and health. It is the doctor's job to counter all this and reveal the patient to himself. His whole duty is to examine carefully, explain, clearly, instruct hopefully, and watch diligently."

As the pattern of life changed, Lord Horder said, the individual loomed larger as the dominant element in the doctor's work. The trouble was no longer that he was cramped by authority, but that he was fatigued or even ran himself to destruction by his freedom. Men and women were beginning to take control of life, just as they had taken control of the earth, the sea, and the air.

But control of life came slowly, and in the meantime they hurt themselves. They realised that the causes of their unhappiness lay in the biological sphere, and so they sought the help of the physician rather than the priest.

"Bewildered by the prospect which their new-found liberty has opened up to them and as yet unaccustomed to deal with the raw material of their natures as now revealed, they come to the doctor for guidance. Every one of these problems is an individual problem and must be handled as such."

"To these people the doctor is the realist. He is in a unique position. If the doctor, was of necessity a humanist in former generations, it behoves him to be all the more a humanist to-day."

IMPERIAL DEFENCESir S. Hoare On EssentialsCO-OPERATION BETWEEN THE SERVICES

Sir Samuel Hoare, First Lord of the Admiralty, spoke at the Edinburgh Philosophical Institution recently on "Imperial Defence and Co-operation between the Services."

He said that the disturbing events of the last 12 months had rightly concentrated the attention of the country on the problems of Imperial defence. Our defence programme was modest compared with some in the world, but essential for ourselves and the world if the forces of peace were to predominate in the world.

There were two principles, founded on common sense and past experience, that ought to be applied to the defence programme. The first was co-operation between the Services; the second was concentration on the essentials. The Services must work together if waste, inefficiency, and failure were to be avoided. Disagreement of effort, whether in organization or direction, must be avoided if in the time of crisis we were to concentrate our effort on the vital points.

In the years after the War there were many fanatics who declared that the air arm had made completely obsolete the two older arms. He never accepted this extreme view, and was glad to see that a much sounder and more comprehensive conception of defence had taken the place of these extremist theories. While the two older Services must adapt themselves to modern conditions, their part in Imperial Defence was no less vital to-day than it was in the past.

The country still needed the Navy to keep open its communications. It still needed the Army for the defence of its bases and the maintenance of law and order. Moreover, if it was to have full value for its expenditure, it must have all three Services, and all three Services working together.

NEED OF NEW ORGANS

With modern inventions, discoveries, and development, and a third arm of unprecedented speed, the whole problem of defence had in the last 20 years become immeasurably more complicated. For the new and complicated functions new organs were undoubtedly necessary. How were these new organs to be created? The answer had been the answer that we had always given to questions of constitutional development. We had left the change as much as we could to natural growth.

We did, indeed, make a broad assignment of duties between the three Services, and we did set up an independent Air Force by Act of Parliament. But the main strands of co-operation had been woven by actual experience, sometimes by such experience as that of the three Services last year in the Mediterranean, sometimes by inquiries of the Committee of Imperial Defence into specific issues, such, for instance, as the recent battleship inquiry; sometimes by combined training and study.

The result was that in the years since the War there had been developed, gradually and without sensation or controversy, a number of co-operative organizations of great value. When he became Secretary of State for Air, there were no regular meetings between the three Chiefs of Staff. As a result of a proposal that he and Lord Trenchard made to the Committee of Imperial Defence, the Chiefs of Staff Committee was formed for the methodical discussion of all important questions of strategy and tactics.

He could say from his own experience that the regular meetings of the Chiefs of Staff had not only laid the foundation of a common understanding between the Services, but had made possible a more modern and comprehensive outlook on defence questions. Moreover, the Chiefs of Staff Committee had brought with it a number of other inter-Service committees for the study of details that had mobilized the brains and energies of many more junior officers.

Second, there had been formed, almost unknown to the country as a whole, a Joint Staff College, the Imperial Defence College. Here again, the double object was being achieved of common study and constant intercourse between the Services. Third, we had now a

"BIRTHDAY" PLANES

Nanking, Oct. 29.

About 100 aeroplanes from all parts of the country have arrived at Nanking to participate in the grand manoeuvres in celebration of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's birthday on Saturday next. The 18 machines which are Nanking's birthday gift are to be christened this morning at the military aerodrome near the old Ming palaces. — Review.

Minister for co-ordinating these various efforts under the Committee of Imperial Defence. The post had, in his view, been needed for several years. Now, with the great problems of the Defence Programme, we could not get on without it.

These developments had come about gradually. They had been forced on us by actual need and not by theory. Because they were proved to be needed, they had been accepted far more readily than would have been the case if they had been thrust down the throats of the Services from without. They were neither complete nor final, for we had by no means reached a perfect organization. How could we, in view of the fact that the problems and the needs were constantly changing?

A MINISTRY OF DEFENCE

No one could dogmatize about the future. His own view was that a Ministry of Defence would never come about from without. We could pass an Act of Parliament and call it a Ministry of Defence Act, but we should not create a real Ministry of Defence until a common understanding animated the Services and common organs had had time to develop.

Without this common foundation, the Ministry would be nothing more than a paper nuisance. If ever there was a Ministry of Defence, it would come not by outside action, but as a matter of established fact. Like Dominion status, it would be a recognition of fact rather than a formal allocation of duties and distinctions. So would it be with the three Services. If we attempted "ex cathedra" to amalgamate them into a single Service, we should certainly fail, and deserve to fail, and we should be guilty of something worse than failure, we should be guilty of "destroying the finest 'esprit de corps' in the world. How much the three Services, and indeed the whole country and the Empire, owed to these three distinctive 'espirts de corps' could not be exaggerated.

In conclusion, Sir Samuel Hoare said: "It may, however, be the course of invention and discovery, that the duties of the three Services will more and more approximate. These are questions for the future, perhaps a distant future, and it is dangerous to be lost in theoretical anticipations when we are engaged upon a practical task of urgent and immense importance. For this great endeavour we need the fullest possible co-operation between the Services. We need also the fullest possible concentration on the essentials."

I believe that so far as the Services are concerned, we shall attain both, and that the country as a whole will watch our efforts anxiously, for we are all faced with a grave situation, but sympathetically, for ninety-nine men and women out of a hundred realize our difficulties and wish to help us to surmount them. In any case, I hope I have said enough to show you that the forces of co-operation are steadily gaining strength, and that the organs that we are creating are making us better able to concentrate upon the essentials of Imperial Defence.

EDUCATION OF
YOUTHNanking Orders To Teachers

Canton, Oct. 29.

In accordance with the orders of the Nanking Department of Education, the Hupeh Provincial Education Department has issued instructions to the teachers of all schools to be careful in the selection of songs and music for the instruction of young boys and girls.

It is most important that songs and music should induce feelings of patriotism and love of country, and besides the composition of songs should be spirited and "homely" and in touch with the feelings of the people, conducing to liveliness, cheerfulness and courage.

All songs and music inducing feelings of depression and sadness must be strictly suppressed, and teachers of music should not make use of phonograph records or other musical instruments when teaching children to sing.

It is best and preferable to teach singing by the human voice, as it enables the children to understand and remember the different tones, and repeat them smoothly and harmoniously.

All startling, exciting and strange tones should be strictly prohibited, as it distracts the thoughts of children, and exerts a demoralizing influence.

Before teaching children to sing, teachers should tell the boys and girls a simple and pleasing story, so as to attract and gain their sympathetic attention. — Chinese Evening Press.

A PRINCE WHO SELLS
MUSHROOMS

Time To Pay A Fine

Prince Maximilian Melkoff, described as of Hale House, Vincanton, Somerset, who was fined 25 at Slough, recently, for driving a car without reasonable consideration, told the Bench that he was a traveller selling mushrooms for a firm of growers in Somerset.

He was also ordered to pay 22 costs and asked for time to pay. He was granted three weeks.

During the war, he said, he served with the Russian Army and gained many awards, including one for bravery. In 1920 he went to Persia and joined the Persian Army. There he gained many other awards and rose to the rank of Major-General.

Witnesses stated that the Prince drove his car over the crown of the road and collided with a car going in the opposite direction.

The Prince said that he swerved to the off-side to avoid a cyclist, but denied going over the crown of the road.

ZOO'S PET BUSH
BABY DEAD

Barbara, one of the Zoo bush babies, has died after having been ill for a week. She was little larger than a mouse, but was one of the most popular inmates, largely owing to her gentleness, her large brown eyes and her up-standing diaphanous ears, which gave her an appearance of perpetual surprise which was irresistible.

Her favourite trick was to explore visitors' pockets, and particularly a glove if one were held out for her. She neglected her babies, which were cared for by another bush baby.

FACTS TO BE OBSERVED

Belgian Minister's Explanation

Brussels, Oct. 28. Belgium's obligations under the existing pacts will not be affected by the recent speech given by the King, said the Foreign Minister in the first Chamber of the Parliament.

The military pact between France and Belgium in 1927, for instance, still remained intact. The same applied to the obligations undertaken by Belgium as a signatory of the Three-Power declaration in London in March this year, regarding the co-operation of the British, French and Belgium military staffs.

On Thursday, it is understood, the Rexists' Party will place a resolution on the table regretting that the Government did not denounce the obligations arising from the military agreement with France and the Locarno Pact.

By not so doing, states the resolution, the Government is itself in opposition to the intentions which were clearly expressed in the King's speech.

LOYAL TO LEAGUE

Brussels, Oct. 28. Belgium does not want neutrality, but desires to remain in the League of Nations, declared M. Spaak, Foreign Minister, when replying to questions in the Chamber.

The Foreign Minister emphasised that King Leopold's recent speech did not involve any breach of Belgium's obligations, but Belgium could not have found national security exclusively on collective security and mutual assistance.

Belgium must say that she would never allow her land to serve as a passage or base of occupation for aggression against other nations. Belgian policy was based on a desire that Belgian independence should be immune from war.

SWAYING THE MASSES

Election Rivals In New York

PUBLIC INTEREST STIMULATED

New York, Oct. 28.

Both President Franklin Roosevelt and Governor Alfred Landon of Kansas, Democrat and Republican candidates for the White House respectively, arrived in New York to-day to make their final efforts to win the support of the densely populated and highly industrialised east, where the vote may decide the election.

This is the first time in many years that two major candidates for the presidency have been in New York together. But they are not expected to meet.

Thousands heard and cheered the candidates as they embarked on a hectic speech-making tour of the city, and hundreds of plain-clothes police and detectives mingled with the crowds as a precaution against violent demonstrations.

Wall Street accorded the President a mixed reception of cheers and hisses.

PUBLICITY STUNTS

With election day less than a week away, public interest has been stimulated by all methods of American publicity, and is rapidly gaining momentum after a slow start. Huge banners drape Manhattan Island's streets, loud-speakers blare election propaganda, motorists have covered their cars with posters, while every other pedestrian wears a button of his favourite candidate.

Speaking in Newark, N.J., Governor Landon condemned the attempt to align Labour into one party, declaring no-one could deliver American Labour to any one party because there were no classes in America.

Anyone claiming to deliver any part of the American people to a political master was betraying the creed of America and threatening to destroy the one classless nation in the world, by dividing it through class hatred.

As the President's procession drove through Manhattan scores of police facing the crowd, stationed at intervals along the route, afforded evidence of the unusual precautions taken to guard the chief executive in the closing stages of this most bitter campaign.

WIDESPREAD SORROW IN MERCHANT NAVY

London, Oct. 28.

News of the death of Sir Edgar Britten has caused widespread sorrow in the merchant navy.

Sir Edgar, famous as the commander of the great Queen Mary, Cunard-White Star holder of the Atlantic Blue Riband, had only arrived at Southampton last night from his home near Liverpool.

In the morning he was found lying unconscious in his cabin by his steward.

Two doctors were summoned and they ordered his immediate removal to a nursing home.

Lady Britten, who had been called, was hurrying to Southampton when she was informed that her husband had died.

Meanwhile, Captain Peel, commander of the Berengaria had been hastily ordered to take the Queen Mary to sea. He was preparing to go on a holiday with his wife when the telephone rang and he was told that he must go immediately aboard the Queen Mary. He had only an hour to dress and get to the docks. Nevertheless, the liner sailed on time.

The passengers were unaware of the tragedy aboard the great ship until a wireless message from London was heard while the vessel was on her way to Cherbourg.

Siam May Modify Attitude

London, Oct. 28.

Rumours that Siam is adopting a more conciliatory tone in the tin restriction conversations were responsible for to-day's exceptionally sharp rise in the price of this commodity, a full 2s.

This change of front on the part of Siamese interests may be traced largely to the hardening of the Netherlands hearts, for the Dutch miners following the devaluation of the guilder, now say they will not support better terms for Siam. The British Government is using its good offices in this matter and striving to secure an agreement, which, it is understood, is no further off than a settlement of a disputed amount of 1,000 tons.

The market, however, is inclined to consider to-day's rise as somewhat exaggerated and advises caution with a view to possible armistice and excursions between now and eventual agreement.

Well-instructed circles believe that a counter-offer from Siam is to be expected, which may cause the International Tin Committee to reconsider the attitude which, it is understood, has already been laid down for publication after the meeting of November 3.

FOUR-YEAR PLAN IN GERMANY

Goering's Statement

Berlin, Oct. 28.

A large concourse of people heard General Goering give his second address on Germany's New Four-Year Plan, at the "Sport's Palace" on Wednesday night.

Of primary importance, stated the speaker, was the need to strengthen and extend the German economic system. "It can no longer be tolerated that our 'throat' be menaced by the foreign 'flint,'" exclaimed Goering to the accompaniment of resounding cheers.

"In the next four years we will break off finger for finger, this 'flint' till the German 'throat' is free again."

The minister went on to say that Germany possessed no colonies "which were stolen from us in the war." She therefore possessed no raw materials. It required gold to purchase these materials. "We would pay for them with gold if all our gold was not stolen too!"

All the necessary foodstuffs could not be grown in Germany, but it was his intention to extract the last ounce from German soil, and one of the most important tasks of the Four Year Plan, was to ensure a good crop.

Regarding petrol supply now imported in large quantities, Goering predicted that in eighteen months "Germany will be independent of petrol from abroad."

Turning to unemployment, General Goering said that whereas other nations were confronted with a problem which was taxing the resources of their government, German industry was looking for more workers. It had to be understood by the workers that production on a large scale could only be achieved when they—everyone—worked steadily to preserve the harmony of the plant, since Germany was no place for any dissension or strikes.

Confidence in each other and in the Chancellor was the greatest capital Germany possessed. "This cannot be bought for all the gold in the world," ended Goering. He was given a tumultuous ovation.

the prizes at this first prize-giving in the new school. I congratulate those boys and girls who have won prizes. It is generally the accepted thing on occasions such as this to commiserate with the 'also-rans.' But one has to be careful. There is often a reason why a boy consistently fails to win a prize. I know, because I never won a prize while at school. So I think we may leave it at that.

"Now, boys and girls, I am not going to make a long speech. Instead, I am going to preach to you a little sermon. Please do not forget at the mention of a sermon: I promise you it will not take long."

"I am going to take as my text for this sermon the words: 'Behold, a chicken come to roost.' Now I want you to look upon myself as the chicken and this table the roost. Let me explain. (Laughter.)

SPEECHES UNSUITABLE

"For many years than I care to remember, I have been attending your prize-givings. On such occasions I have generally been seated on the platform. I have heard many speeches such as I am endeavouring to deliver to you to-day. Invariably it has been with quiet amusement that I have sat and listened to those speeches. Often I was critical. Some speeches I thought were too long; others again quite unsuitable for boys and girls. In fact, I can hardly remember ever hearing a speech, which I considered quite appropriate and exactly suited to the occasion."

"Imagine then my dismay when a short time ago your Headmaster asked me to distribute the prizes to-day. Of course, I immediately replied that I would be only too pleased to come and undertake this pleasant duty. Then, awful thought, I realised that I would have to stand here to-day and address you. I felt quite panicky. In my anxiety, I consulted my daughter—whom several of you may remember was educated at this school and who naturally was better able than myself to suggest what I should say to you to-day."

"She remembered a nice speech given on one occasion, by Lady Southorn. Eagerly, I asked what the theme was. But this she had forgotten. One thing, however, she did remember. She remembered that Lady Southorn in her speech had made mention of Keating's Flea Powder! Wasn't it tragic to think that that one little brain had retained was a passing reference to flea-powder! (Laughter.)

MORAL OF SERMON

"Now, boys and girls, I come to the moral of my little sermon. Consider my unappetizing position to-day. Consider this poor chicken come home to roost. The moral is this: whenever anyone is doing anything whether it be at school, in the playground or in the home, never judge their effort too harshly, never be capricious and over-critical. Remember that one day you may be in a like position yourself. Remember you may be called upon to do the same sort of thing, and like myself this morning, may perhaps not be able to do it nearly so well."

"Before resuming my seat, I should like to make reference to your late Headmaster, Mr. Nightingale. If Mr. Nightingale had been with us to-day, he would have been a proud man. You, Sir, have made kindly reference to my interest in this school but such interest was, as nothing compared as to the interest displayed by Mr. Nightingale and it has always been a matter for regret that financial stringency caused delay in the building of this school until after his retirement from the service. The Central British School and the well-being of his boys and girls were the thoughts continually uppermost in his mind. Prize-giving days were red-letter days in his life and I feel that he would have given almost anything to have been with us to-day."

CHEER BY WRITING

"On these occasions, I can remember that following this ceremony three hearty cheers were always given for Mr. Nightingale. He is not with us to-day, but may I suggest that you can still cheer him. You can cheer him tremendously by writing to him and thus show that he is still in your thoughts. I feel certain that nothing would give him more pleasure than to be remembered in that way."

"I cannot conclude without reference to your present Headmaster. In Mr. Upsdell you have one who is eminently fitted for the high office which he holds. His is a responsible position and he is proud of his school and its pupils."

I trust that every boy and girl in this school will loyally give him the best that is in them. (Applause.)

At the conclusion of Mr. Wylie's speech, Mr. Upsdell said:

"I know I am voicing the feeling of the pupils when I express the thanks of the school to Mr. Wylie for so kindly coming here this morning to distribute the prizes. Mr. Wylie's interest in this school has been long and lasting. We are fortunate, too, in having Mrs. Wylie present to-day, because I know of the interest she takes in the school behind the scenes. And we have also present to-day Mrs. Duncan, whom we have always known as Helen, to complete the family."

The Speech Day was concluded by the pupils giving three cheers for Mr. Wylie and for the school and the singing of the National Anthem.

LONDON AND ITS TRAMP STEAMERS HISTORY

Lord Mayor's Show

Ghosts will walk the City on November 9—ghosts of London's prentices, of Perkin Warbeck, Henry VII, Henry VIII, Queen Elizabeth, the Earl of Leicester, Cromwell, Walter, Lord George Gordon, of all those who have tried to defend or disturb London, states "The Observer."

London's defence, the pageant of this year's Lord Mayor's Show, is a strangely peaceful tale. Few great clads have been less fought over—air raids during the Great War, and in other centuries threats of invasion, and occasional riots. For the rest, London's citizens have had to seek their battlefields beyond her frontiers.

Citizen soldiers were always a jest until 1914, but those who bear the cobblestones of old centuries ring in the Lord Mayor's show under the feet of archers, hand-gunners, pikemen, billmen, arquebusers, musketeers, militiamen, and volunteers, will understand perhaps why London has been hardly ever ravaged by war.

The boys of the City of London School O.T.C., who are to march with the weapons and harness of 1539, will represent the kind of Londoner who, not so very long before, had manned the City's ordnance and cleared away houses close to the walls when the Cornish rebels got as far as Deptford Strand in Perkin Warbeck's day, and who, since then, had been handling their bows and practising thrust and parry in Finsbury Fields.

THE ARMADA THREAT

The musketeers and pikemen of the trained bands, who marched to meet the Armada threat at Tisbury will be there. Queen Elizabeth was always calling Londoners to arms. Her Lord Mayors had to raise sometimes, at a few hours' notice, now three thousand, now ten thousand, now six thousand men. That she got them so readily says much for her power to command. At the beginning of her reign the citizens had objected to the practice of arms because of "the most parts of those our apprentices and handy-craftsmen who constantly are kept at work; who also, if they should have that liberty to be trayned and drawn from their workes in these matters, wolde thereby fall into such idleness and insolency that many wolde never be reduced agayne into any good order or service."

Still, they marched when they were told to, and marched back again untested, white uniforms with the City arms in scarlet unstained, caplains riding immaculate in black velvet, ensigns in their midst wearing white satin faced with black sarsenet, a company of whiffers or trumpeters going before, and all neither bowed nor bloody.

"HOME! HOME!"

The men of the H.A.C. and of the Tower Hamlets Rifles who will march in the show as off-icer and men of the 1643 trained bands, will look brave, but of their originals, Waller, Parliamentary commander, complained. "I was extremely plagued with the mutinies of the City Brigade, who are grown to that point of disorder that I have no hope to retain them, being come to their old song of 'Home! Home!'"

There was more reliance on professional troops after that, as the presentation by the Grenadier Guards, the Royal Marines, and the Royal Fusiliers of their former selves in Restoration and Great Rebellion days will show.

But the trained bands were not done with. The H.A.C., appearing as the Grenadier Company of the City Trained Bands in 1710, will represent the immediate forerunners of those Londoners who turned the Royal Exchange into a barracks in 1745, the lawyers of the City forming themselves into a regiment and offering to serve a bodyguard for the Royal Family.

The infantry battalion of the H.A.C. in the uniform of 1789, and men of the 24th and the 22nd London Regiment as the volunteers of 1800, will represent the citizen soldiers who having learned how to deal with mobs during the Gordon riots, were able to quell the more justifiable food riots of 1800.

Twelve thousand London volunteers were reviewed by George III in 1793, and by 1803 they had increased to twenty-seven thousand. The French invasion threat of 1793 had produced the first London volunteers, as distinct from the old trained bands and City Militia. The Queen's Westminsters will show how they were dressed in 1800, after another invasion scare had again called them into being, and a year before Queen Victoria reviewed eighteen thousand of them in Hyde Park.

At the end will come a sudden reminder of a time when, after centuries of mustering and marching back again, Londoners had to fight to keep war from their city in grim earnest the time of Gallipoli and Passchendaele and the last advance of 1918.

How They Brought The Cargoes Home

Days when the captains of British merchant vessels were encouraged to break the Board of Trade regulations and load well down below the Pilsaol-line are recalled in a book published recently ("Ships, Coolies and Rice." Sampson Low, 12s. 6d.).

The author, Mr. L. G. W. White, sailed in a tramp steamer, the Megna of the famous Nourse Line, as an apprentice throughout the greater part of the war. This is how he describes the loading of a cargo of sugar from the West Indies to England in the summer of 1917:

"The return to England was made under exceptional conditions. So alarming had the U-boat menace become to the people of Britain, and so serious the threat to her supplies, that shipmasters were told to load down to the safety-line, disregarding the official Board of Trade marks."

"Such is the effect of war upon even the most solid institutions. A captain was allowed—even officially encouraged—to draw an imaginary safety-line of his own—disregarding both the law and the prophets."

"Who cared for the faint possibility of foundering on account of overloading? When there were so many risks that were not nearly so remote, and when the folk at home were threatened with starvation. Captain Evans (the commander of the Megna) was instructed to 'load right down' at his own discretion, and he did so."

ONLY ONE REPLY

So the Megna sailed homewards, and it was typical of the British Merchant Service, that Captain Evans, safely arrived at Greenwich Buoy, had only one reply when asked how his ship had behaved while carrying hundreds of tons beyond her peace time load: "We didn't know we had it aboard."

This book, which breathes the atmosphere of the open sea and brings back memories of cabin curtains swaying in the breeze and the indescribable scene of a ship on a hot day, is in part a history of the Nourse Line, and in part the account of a tramp steamer's voyaging during the war.

From both aspects it will be intensely interesting to all who have ever voyaged in ocean-going vessels, whether under steam or sail, and as a present for a boy who has the sea in his blood it cannot be too highly recommended.

FAMOUS GROUND SAVED FOR RUGBY

Richmond Clubs To Carry On

After two years of negotiation the dispute which threatened to cause the Richmond Rugby Football Club and the London Scottish Football Club to withdraw from Richmond Athletic Ground, where they are joint tenants, and play their matches on some more distant site, has, it is understood, been settled, and these clubs will continue to play at the old ground.

The Richmond Athletic Association, tenant of the Crown, had been compelled to raise its rents to the sub-tenants, the two clubs concerned, and it seemed that a deadlock had been reached. The Rugby Union's good offices, which could not for various reasons be exercised in the normal way in which Rugby clubs are helped, have, it is believed, now been brought into operation.

"It is true we are to continue playing at the old ground," Mr. R. H. O'Brien, hon. secretary of the Richmond R.F.C., stated in a "Morning Post" representative "but while I naturally have some knowledge as to what negotiations have been carried on I cannot make any statement."

At the end will come a sudden reminder of a time when, after centuries of mustering and marching back again, Londoners had to fight to keep war from their city in grim earnest the time of Gallipoli and Passchendaele and the last advance of 1918.

Dan Bugler, owned by the South African millionaire, Sir Abe Bailey, won the race two lengths ahead of Sir George Bullough's Draytons with the grey horse of Mr. Benson, Laureate II running third.

Pegomas who ousted Dan Bugler as favourite, chiefly received his backing because he was drawn next to the rails, whereas Dan Bugler was 17th. But Pegomas was never with the leaders.

It is stated that Sir Abe Bailey backed Dan Bugler to win $10,000.

Army, the sum of $1,456 was distributed, mostly to Chinese charities. The 1935-36 Competition, also won by the Army, produced the sum $2,008 of which $500 was allotted by the Committee to Royal Naval Charities, $500 to Army Charities, and the remainder $1,008 to Chinese charities.

It is hoped that all football enthusiasts and others charitably disposed will turn up in force, to witness what will undoubtedly be a grand exhibition of competitive football.

SERIOUS OFFENCE ALLEGED

Corrosive Acid Thrown

WOMAN CHARGED

"Curious Case" Says Prosecution

What was described by the prosecution as a curious case, came before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon.

In the dock stood Mok Kin, kept woman, against whom committal proceedings were begun, on a charge that on October 6 at 168, Johnston Road, first floor, Wanchai, unlawfully and maliciously applied with a syringe to Tong Tak Shing, male, corrosive fluid, with intent to burn, maim or disfigure, or to do some grievous bodily harm.

Opening the case for the prosecution, Det-Insp. A. E. Carey, of the Wanchai C.I.D., stated that the complainant was an accountant employed at a pork stall in the Lockhart Road Market and for the past four or five years had been cohabitating with the defendant at 168, Johnston Road. About October 3 the complainant asked the defendant for the return of $15 which he had given her for safe keeping as he had to return it to a friend. She refused to give the money alleging that the complainant was going to spend it on women. He asked twice for the money and she refused to give it up.

COMPLAINANT SCOLDED

On October 6, about 12.30 p.m. the complainant returned home and she started to scold him and accused him of going with women. A man named Chan On, who was a friend of the complainant, was present at the time. Complainant again asked for the $15 but she refused to give it to him.

She was sitting on the bed and the complainant gave her a push and she fell backwards. From some unknown place the defendant produced a syringe and squirted the contents into his eye. She was seized by Chan On and the complainant's brother who on hearing shouts of "save life" came into the cubicle. They took her to the kitchen and locked the door.

DEFENDANT STARCHED

The defendant blew a police whistle and in order to stop her they opened the door and took her out. They searched her and took away ten cent pieces amounting to a little over a dollar and the whistle.

Complainant took the syringe to the Government Civil Hospital where he handed it to Dr. K. H. Utley who treated him for his injuries.

That was the first intimation that the police had of the case. Det-Sgt. Downman and a Chinese detective went to the floor and saw the defendant there with the complainant's brother who had been posted as a sentry to watch her. She was told that the complainant was in hospital with a badly burned eye which had been caused by some corrosive fluid.

STATEMENT MADE

The woman was cautioned in the usual manner and in answer to the detective she stated: "Because the husband had not looked after me family and often went out to engage women. I spoke to him about that in a few words. He then struck me and told me to leave. I threw the fluid at him."

Questioned as to where she obtained the corrosive fluid, the defendant took the police to the front verandah where on a shelf a bottle was found. Both the syringe and the bottle were submitted to the Government Analyst who reported that they contained hydrochloric acid, two-thirds commercial strength.

The fluid also contained other properties such as gold, copper and boric acid.

When charged at the station, the defendant said: "I do not wish to say anything."

VISION AFFECTED

"The complainant was discharged from hospital on October 7," Insp. Carey stated. "Apparently he suffered no serious ill-effects although he complains that his vision is not as good as it was. It is a very curious case."

Tong Tak Shing then gave evidence and after further testimony the hearing was adjourned.

defendant replied that he could not make any living elsewhere.

R. Cunningham asked for 40 days in gaol custody. The case was remanded till Saturday.

KOWLOON ROBBERY SEQUEL

Smart Police Work Revealed

Wong Wing Sang, 36, odd job coolie, of 40 fixed abode of Po San in Shanghai was charged before Mr. Q. A. A. Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday with robbery by two or more, at No. 229 Nathan Road, the residence of a contractor, and his wife, Yu Hok Shing who are the victims, when jewellery and money was stolen; valued at over $1,000.

Inspector A.H. Elston said that on September 22 the defendant gained admittance by stating he had a present to deliver from the contractor. He produced a revolver while the second defendant, Sze Hok Chuen entered the room with a knife in his hand. The defendants closed the windows and door so that they could not be seen from the outside.

The first defendant was arrested whilst boarding a boat for Shanghai. He was later identified by Yu Hok Shing.

Yu Hok Shing's wife of Shing Mun, said that first defendant produced a small fire-arm and threatened her. "I did not want to die so I opened the safe." He then took a hand bag, diamond rings, ruby rings and two wallets containing altogether $130.

After the three other witnesses gave evidence, his worship adjourned the case.

CONVICTION QUASHED

A Full Court appeal against a magisterial conviction in a recent battery trade marks case on September 1, before Sir Atholl MacGregor, Chief Justice, and Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden, Paine Judge was brought to a conclusion this morning when judgment was delivered.

The Paul Battery Co., Ltd., of Nos. 284-8, Lockhart Road, and the Sun Light Company, of Nos. 173, Des Voeux Road, appealed against the conviction against them for infringing Trade Mark No. 211 of 1928, owned by the National Carbon Co. of America, and used by their subsidiary company, the Eveready Co.

Mr. H. G. Sheldon, K.C., instructed by Mr. D. L. Sirell, appeared for the appellants, whilst Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jnr., was instructed by Mr. G. S. Hugh-Jones of Wilkinson and Grist for the respondents.

Concluding his judgment His Lordship said: "I am of opinion that the dissimilarities to which I have drawn attention are in themselves sufficient to make the whole of the two labels dissimilar but I am fortified in that opinion by the additional fact that not only does the 'Eveready' advertisement appearing in April 1935 in the Canton paper to which I have already referred, refer to the battery as the 'Wing Pei' brand, but the evidence of Wang Wa Yan, the only witness who was called to testify, to the trade in such batteries, is to the effect that what are known about the 'Eveready' battery are the number 850 and the name 'Wing Pei' (Eveready)."

"I find, therefore, as a fact that the 'Paul' mark does not so nearly resemble the 'Eveready' 1928 mark as to be calculated to deceive, and these appeals therefore must be allowed."

Mr. Sheldon applied for costs for the appeal and the hearing in the Court below, this being granted.

ANOTHER CASE

In proceedings arising from an arbitration between the Li Yik Firm and Sze Tung Company, a cross appeal was heard before a Full Court yesterday morning, composed of Sir Atholl MacGregor, the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice J. J. Hayden, and the Acting Paine Judge, Mr. J. A. Fraser.

The appeal brought by the Sze Tung Company was dismissed, while judgment was given in favour of Li Yik Firm.

The action was brought following a dispute over damages in connection with the alleged failure to fulfil a building contract on the part of the Sze Tung Company.

The dispute went into arbitration but Li Yik Firm, not satisfied with damages, brought the dispute into Court.

Mr. H. G. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. C. E. R. Sanderson, appeared for the Sze Tung Company, while Mr. Leo D'Almada, Jnr., instructed by Mr. G. S. Hugh-Jones, represented the Li Yik Firm.

The Proven STOMACH REMEDY for Bad Cases

Amazing evidence of the remarkable speed with which indigestion and stomach pains can be stopped has been revealed by medical experiments and X-ray photographs of actual cases. These prove the ingredients of 'Bisurated' Magnesia to be the quickest-acting and most effective known to medical science. Within 3 minutes a teaspoonful of 'Bisurated' Magnesia in a little water produces complete relief in cases where numerous other remedies had failed entirely.

Its Action Explained—

Simply take a teaspoonful of the powder in a little water. The moment this soothing draught reaches the tormented stomach it begins to soothe the sour, fermenting undigested food. The contents of the stomach become as bland and soothing as milk to the sensitive stomach lining. The pain quickly lessens and presently disappears. By following the treatment after each meal, your harassed stomach will soon lose its tenderness and grow strong, until you can eat whatever you like and enjoy every meal without fear of wind and pain.

A NOTED ENGLISH DOCTOR SAYS:

"I find that 'Bisurated' Magnesia taken after my meals is the only thing that keeps me free from pain and discomfort, and I take it regularly. I often prescribe it for my patients, and have had very good results."
H.G. — M.A., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.

ANOTHER DOCTOR SAYS:

"'Bisurated' Magnesia gives excellent results and is the ideal remedy for stomach pains and acidity. It is particularly recommended for Dyspepsia, Gastritis, Stomach Pains, Flatulence, and even Stomach Ulcers."
H.L. — Faculty of Medicine, Paris.

That world-famous Medical Paper, "The Lancet," writes about the strengthening influence of Sanatogen:

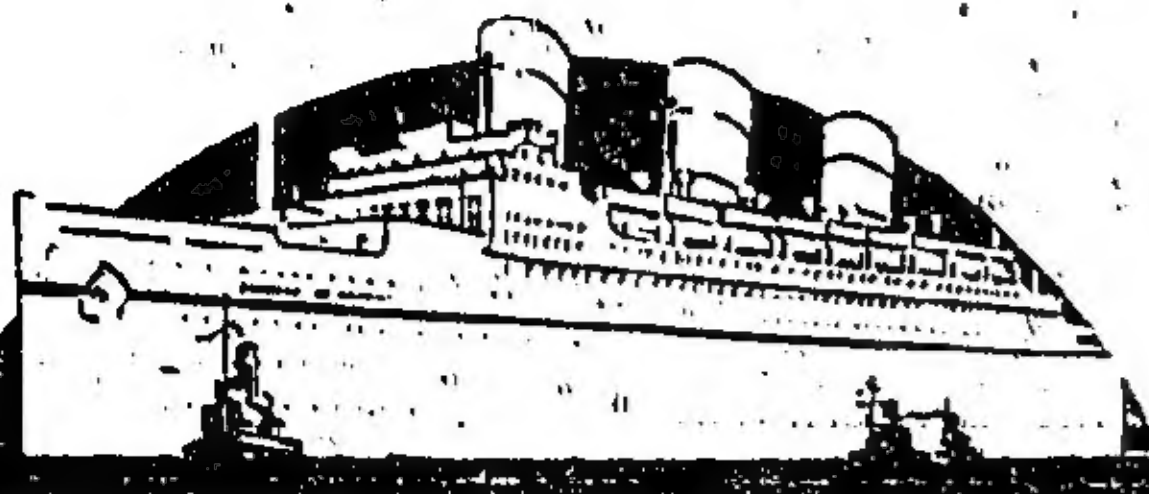

"There is abundant evidence of the value of Sanatogen as a restorative and food, and more particularly in cases of general debility."

When you do not feel so well, start taking Sanatogen. Every chemist sells it and Sanatogen will soon make you thoroughly strong and healthy again, full of youthful vitality.

"Safety First" Campaign

It is hoped that the illuminated train will be again used this year, and tentative arrangements have been made for the use of the Hong Kong Electric Company's broadcasting amplifier in pointing out the faults of dangerous driving.

NEW FEATURE

A feature that has been in use in America for some years will be adopted by the Traffic Department here for the first time during Safety First Campaign week. Automobiles will be tested by traffic officers as to the safety of their brakes, and the unwary driver may possibly be brought into Court on a summons for faulty brakes if he is not cautious. The examination is very brief and efficient, and anyone may be subjected to it.

All cars will be asked to exhibit the Safety First badge on their windshield.

There is the possibility of a large electric triangular sign being erected on the hillside where it can be the most easily seen. Besides the lectures to be given at public places, prominent people of the Colony will give a series of talks over ZBW during Safety First week, four being Europeans and four Chinese.

"STUPIDITY OF PEDESTRIANS"

"The accidents which occur in the Colony are not mainly due to fast driving," said Mr. Bidmead, "but more to the stupidity of the lower class of pedestrian. We hope to inaugurate a system where the busiest intersections will have constables on duty to direct traffic and keep the pedestrian from being run over. We shall also insist that the pedestrian keep on the sidewalk, and I hope that we get the full co-operation of the public in this matter."

"The total traffic accidents for the year 1935 were 2,428 and we hope to keep the number much below that this year," concluded Mr. Bidmead.

WAR PRECAUTIONS IN CANTON

Canton, Oct. 28.

The following notice was issued by the police authorities for the information of the inhabitants of Canton yesterday:

(a) To construct bomb-proof cellars and shelters;
(b) To remove all inflammable structures from tops of houses, and
(c) To prepare and store one full month's provisions.

It is understood that a separate proclamation has also been issued instructing the inhabitants what to do in case of an outbreak of war, and not to leave their houses and run about in the streets.

Much excitement and distress now prevails throughout the city, owing to the impossibility of the poor inhabitants to raise money for the purchase of one month's provisions.

PRIVATE TEMPLES AND SHRINES

Canton, Oct. 29.

The police authorities of the Canton City have received instructions to close and suppress the numerous private temples and shrines, whose wicked and unscrupulous keepers wax fat on the gullibility of the ignorant and superstitious people.

Only the temples in honour of China's sages and patriots will be allowed to remain.

WHAT NEXT FOR HUMANITY?

not want his listeners to get the idea that he was advocating war. Instead it was up to people to do their utmost to postpone war in the hope that if it was postponed long enough it would be postponed definitely.

Referring to the film, "Things to Come," the speaker said that Mr. H. G. Wells was a remarkable writer and what he had forecasted in 1900 had come true.

Troops, he said, did not share the view that the next war would mean the end of civilization. He thought that when it did come and when it was over a more rational scheme of things might be established.

SOCIAL CREDIT SYSTEM

The speaker said that he thought many systems as they were now would disappear completely and substitutions would come about somewhat on the lines of the social credit system. That would probably be in the year 2000 and he thought that it would be after this that there would be the beginning of the golden age of the fifth root race. After that, and for probably the next 50,000 years the sixth root race would dominate over the whole of the world and by the use of scientific prowess would gain complete control over the forces, such as wind, storms, etc., and so would make the world a much better place to live in. Machinery would dominate everything.

Religion, he said, would be different from what it was now. The majority of religions, he said, especially the Western religions, did not present a rational explanation of the creation of the world and had made no effort to do so, and what little they had put forward was so utterly smashed by science.

AETHEISM MORE RAMPANT

He did not think, however, that theosophy would ever become popular as the trouble with theosophy was that one had to be so infinitely patient for so little reward. Aethestism would become more rampant than it was nowadays. Perhaps it was a gloomy picture, he said, but the sixth root race had a most difficult path before it.

The speaker saw a brighter outlook for art. It would become more widely known than it was to-day. Houses, buildings, parks and more especially things that were created so essentially by man would become modified and beautified by the unting of artists with the manufacturer and in so doing people's lives would be made more harmonious.

Among those present at the gathering there were Dr. Li Cho Yau, Mr. and Mrs. Ng Chok Wing, Mr. and Mrs. Pun Bai Yin, Messrs. Li Po Kwal, Li Choh Son, Woo Did Ng, Li Ngai Chee, Chan Kuan Po, Chan Han Lin, Mrs. Chong Kwong Nai, Mrs. Chan Yu Mok, Mrs. Mok Ki Fung, Rev. Li Kau Yin, and Rev. Chang Chok Ling.

NO SURRENDER TO JAPAN

1. The establishment of a special region in North China, will be limited to the provinces of Hopei and Chahar. Negotiations for the establishment of similar regions in Shansi, Suiyuan, and Shanung can be conducted later.

2. Pertaining to the question of a joint campaign against the Reds, Mr. Kawagoe suggested that a special area should be named for trial. And, if the trial proves successful, the joint Sino-Japanese anti-Red campaign will be extended to other parts of China.

The members of the new standing committee are General Chia Teh-chao, one-time Premier of the old Peking Government, General Chin Teh-chen, Mayor of Peiping, General Chi Shih-yuan, former Tsuchun of Kiangsu, General Chi Shih-yuan, Mr. Li Sze-hao, new chairman of the economic commission, and Mr. Chang Shi-chao, former Justice and Education Minister in the Peking Government.

Germany which is attempting to discipline, exaggerated individualism.

"The English method of education encroaches on every realm of personal life in which we are accustomed to greater freedom.

"But it is perfect for the creation of politically useful citizens.

"The Englishman avoids everything that is foreign, and at the bottom of his heart considers the foreigner as always of less value.

"This may, in part, be due to the objection which the Englishman has to thinking."
